FACULTY POSITION IN HEALTH SERVICES RESEARCH:

Health Economics

The Pennsylvania State University College of Medicine, Department of Public Health Sciences, Division of Health Services Research, in Hershey, PA, seeks a health services researcher with expertise in health economics for a tenure-track faculty position as Associate or Full Professor. The candidate will be expected to conduct independent and collaborative research and to participate in graduate-level teaching in a growing academic medical center with an expanding research base and exciting opportunities for research and training.

The candidate will join a multidisciplinary department (biostatistics, epidemiology, and health services research) that offers a masters degree program in Public Health Sciences and opportunities for research and teaching in conjunction with other departments on the medical campus as well as with colleagues at the University Park campus of Penn State. The candidate will be expected to develop a research program and to take primary responsibility for a graduate-level course in health economics. Requirements for the position include a doctoral degree in health economics or a related field and research experience demonstrating the capacity to apply health economics theory and methods in health services research. Familiarity with large databases is preferred, including MEPS, USRDS, NHANES, SEER-Medicare, or others.

Major research interests in the Department of Public Health Sciences are cancer, lung diseases, women’s health, child health, rural health, and quality of care/outcomes research. The Department provides excellent staff support in grants administration, statistical programming, data management, and research computing. Opportunities also exist for joint appointments in departments at the University Park campus of the Pennsylvania State University.

Penn State is committed to affirmative action, equal opportunity and the diversity of its workforce. For your health, Hershey Medical Center is a smoke-free campus.
